I understand that most details of a speaker's visit, such as obtaining equipment necessary for the talk, picking up at airport, working with Margaret on hotel reservations, requesting an office for longer visitors, are coordinated by the host, and the host is responsible for return of keys lent to the visitor.

It is the responsibility of the host to make sure that the visitor understands that a colloquium talk should be aimed in large part towards a general audience. More technical or narrow talks may be more appropriate as seminar talks than as colloquia.

Approval for this request cannot be transferred to a different time or different speaker without express approval from the colloquium chair and the fiscal assistant handling the colloquium moneys.
